SHIRTS AND UNDERWEAR TO ORDER.—Our old Oroville friend, James Greentree, now of the Anchor Shirt Factory, San Francisco, is temporarily quartered at the Ormsby House where he will take the measure and orders of such gentlemen as want a new stock of first-class, custom made linen and underclothes, or shirts, undershirts, drawers, etc., etc. This is one of the best established and most reliable houses in San Francisco. As to Mr. Greentree we will vouch for him as one of the most reliable business men of the Pacific Coast. What he says he will do he will do. He promises to supply the very first quality of goods. He can be relied on to carry out his promise. Remember, he can be found at the Ormsby, where orders may be left. Read his advertisement.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PARTY.—We are informed that for the amusement and pleasure of the members of the Presbyterian Sunday School a party will be given at Turn Verein Hall this evening. Music, games and a supper are the features, to the enjoyment of which the scholars of the school will be admitted free of charge. Outsiders are cordially invited to attend and take part in the expected good time, for which liberty they will be charged the small sum of fifty cents. The ladies of the congregation who are preparing refreshments for the occasion, are requested to have the same at the hall by 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Only about two and a half or three feet of snow on the summit—so Buck Davis says. Also he says that the weather at the lake is no colder than here. That the snow about the Glenbrook is more than six inches deep. Hank Monk and a lot more came out from there on Wednesday.

UNCLE THREED is after the Prison grounds with a sharp stick—he and his assigns and apprentices. He has got his case into Uncle Sams Court, we see. Shall watch the same and report progress.

NEW YEARS EVE.

When far-remembered and great days come round, the temptation which assails the journaliferous mind is to make a show of rote learning, to mine the encyclopedias and disembowel biographies of the dead parts of 'em. The coming on of a new January suggests the recollection of one's mythologies and hauling out old two-faced Janus, the ancient Latin deity who looked two ways for Sunday and to whom the month which was named after him was sacred. But what has that old double-headed Leathen god to do with New Year's Eve? Why lug him into the social circle and set him up to enliven the genial atmosphere of the blessed time? Indeed, when we think of the pleasant party with which all faithful Methodists are in the companionship of a love-fest to watch and pray while life enforces to death and the New Year is born upon the breath which wafts the old one into eternity, we frown away all Januses and other names and forms of the Pagan world, and recognize the better spirit of the hour and feel compelled to—

It is a delightful thing to think of and enjoy, that we have a perfect week's seven pleasant, harmonizing days, between Christmas and New Year's. In countries where the earlier Christian customs and influences are still strong, much stronger than in our new country, this week, which is bounded by December on the north side and January on the south, is a holiday time for everybody, old as well as young. Here we give it over to the school children, while ourselves sharpen our faces with the business contest of money-getting, drudging and outwitting our fellow-men. New Year's Eve is a cheery time. The greetings are kindly and neighborly, for the passing year reminds us that we are all growing old, all marching on to the last goal of a common humanity, all parting with a part of ourselves when we bid adieu to the declining year. Thus the bonds of sympathy and mortal interest are brought to mind and strengthened, and there is a sense of tenderness and solidarity which we all share and share alike, like people whose little temporary world is a ship at sea, and to whom any danger is a common lot. What is that which in the winter time, so much oftener reminds us of the events of early childhood than we are so reminded at any other season? Is it out of the fact that cold purifies everything alike, and that one frosty time is in all respects similar to its phenomena to another? The breath of spring, when it fans the cheek and fills the senses with its fragrance and its life-bringing properties, always awakens thoughts and retrospects of other springs; summer smells and summer clouds, the quivering air and the big shower drops, the scent of berries and the cooling breeze which waves the grass and rustles the leaves; the carol of birds and the homely and not unwelcome song of the cheery, twilight frog, these recall many a half-forgotten dream or hope or meeting which came to us in the morning of life, when we were susceptible to impressions which might not affect us now; the sighing winds, the crisp leaves, the freshening airs, the welcome fruits of autumn favor the contemplative spirit, and "memory will bring back the feeling" of other days and other scenes; but there is something in the crushing sound which follows one's tramping upon frozen snow; something in the plaint of icicles; something in the seeing of tiny tracks of birds upon the new-fallen snow; something in the swirl of dead leaves across an icy pool; something in the shape of a girlish shoe in the frozen earth; something in the deep suggestiveness of a black stream flowing under broken sheets of ice and fringed down to its dark and cruel margin with robes of snow; something in the lights and shadows, forms and apparitions of mid-winter which ferret out the fragments that haunt the inner cells of the memory, as the features and accompaniments of no other season do. The white mark of an exploded snowball on a gray fence board—how it will light a train of old recollections which, stored away, we know not where, will start out and outshine forty years of the blurred memories that date back to childhood and youth, the struggles, events, sorrows and dissipations of young manhood, the cares and triumphs, adversities and achievements of the maturer and more responsible age, and startle us with a fresh and fitting recurrence of an emotion only once experienced, then forgot, and now for a moment revived, until we half doubt that life be not a dream and dreams the only reality. Oh memory of childhood! how it hoards up the emotions of the dead past, and how it flashes them forth like a passing apparition in the gloaming! The golden visions of boyhood; the loves and yearnings of the days of one's first school time; the crowded, misty memories when life was all warmth and health and hope; when hearts were tender and faith was implicit; how they are awakened by the passing tocsin of a far-off bell, ringing across the starlit snow of New Year's Eve!

The Murphy Troupe at the Carson Theater.

There's no use a talking. Blood will tell! The popular instinct is always right. The people know the men and women of genius and cannot be kept away from 'em. Joe Murphy and his excellent troupe were greeted last night with an extraordinary house. It was the biggest audience that has been squeezed into the Carson Theater since its renovation. The performance was tip top. There was old Joe in his glory as "That Rascal Pat,"—as rollicking an Irishman as ever twirled a shillelagh or broke a head. How the scamp did steal that kiss from his master's sweet heart! It was as rich as cream. Nothing better than this anywhere. Joe improves year by year, like a true artist. The reason is he studies, studies hard and keeps his head turned industriously toward his business. It is a positive treat to see such an Irishman as he gave us last night. We date back to Barney Williams in Barney's best days, when we saw him. Well, the rest of the show comes well with Murphy. That is put enough in all conscience—that is to say, the dancing was first rate; banjo ditto, ballads excellent. As to Murphy's sketches—they were Joe Murphy's—and that's enough. We left the big audience screaming with laughter over the "Anti-Coolie Question." Go to-night if you love fun—and go early or you won't get a seat.

NET PROCEEDS OF THE BENEFIT.—Mrs. Ellen Adams and Mrs. Brock of the committee of ladies in whose hands were intrusted the affairs of the benefit to Mr. Allen called at the Appeal office last evening and stated that the gross proceeds of the benefit to Mr. Allen amounted to $487, and that after paying all expenses they turned over to the beneficiary, last evening, the sum of $410.10. This certainly is a very handsome present. These ladies in behalf of themselves and their associates in this beneficent enterprise desire to return thanks to the public of Ormsby county for the very liberal manner in which they gave support to this project. The Benefit was not at all a sectarian affair, but, rather, of a "union" character—all sects and many people not belonging to any sect participating. Especial mention is due to the good people of Empire for the liberal hand they took in this matter—doubtless through the well directed exertions of a lady member of the church resident there. The Episcopal ladies say that they have been so well treated in this business that they feel under obligations to reciprocate toward other sects when occasion may offer. Certainly it seems to us that the Benefit was a very great success and that the ladies have every reason to be proud of their efforts.

FOURTH JULY COMPANY ORGANIZED.—Yesterday the stockholders of the Fourth July Mining Company (Eureka District) organized by the election of officers, as follows: Trustees, A. B. Driesbach, W. T. Davis, M. C. Gardner, John S. Neel, E. W. Hillyer. President, A. B. Driesbach; Treasurer, E. W. Hillyer; Secretary, W. T. Davis. Of the indubitable richness of this mine we gave some assayers statistics the other day. We are glad to believe that these gentlemen have struck a bonanza.

K. or P. Election.—Carson Lodge No. 4 K. of P. elected the following officers last night: P. C. Bro. Jas. Hunt; C. C. Bro. A. S. Kessler; V. C. Bro. W. H. M. Cobb; Depute Bro. A. Leports; M. of E. Bro. E. James; M. of F. Bro. J. Duane; K. of R. & S. Bro. J. C. Baubler; Trustee 18 Mrs. Bro. L. Anderson.
